

OZORA FESTIVAL

26 JULY
25 AUGUST
2018

So I got a 2 hour ride to the countryside grounds where this big festival was at, and dropped my stuff in the small tent that would be my home for the next couple of weeks. Ozora actually builds permanent structures and buildings (more sustainable) like the 2 store offices that I was part of painting a big mural. This was a 5 day job, which was non stop spraying under the super hot sun, and extra challenging done with only a ladder. To my right, Holland artist Enigma was stenciling geometric for meals (3 a day) we were served in a workers eating area, lots of soups. Then at nights, after my work, dinner and shower, I would go and hang out with my Canadian artist friends, "Wood Vibe Tribe" and started painting my canvas inside this cool wooden cat head sculpture they had built, having good art conversations with Brad Radwood + Caro Caro as they painted the inner walls.

Tiffany and me, after a whole day of trying not to talk to each other, decided to go back to our long-distance non-relationship love friendship, as we like having each other in our lives at any level. Chatting, flirting and having no expectations for the future. Then, by the time I finished my mural, the 8 day festival officially started, with 40000 freaks arriving.
